Jennifer is an independent consultant primarily focusing on working with executive level leaders to help them create cohesive and effective leadership teams. She “facilileads” leadership retreats for the C-Suites of organizations in a wide variety of industries, as well as provides one-on-one leadership coaching. She has also designed a comprehensive leadership training facilitation program for use with multiple layers of leadership throughout organizations. Areas of expertise include Leadership Development, Communication Skills, Interpersonal Skills, and Teambuilding. As a certified facilitator of DiSC, Jennifer teaches organizations and individuals the power of self-understanding to help them achieve their maximum potential and improve the bottom line.

In her workshops, coaching, keynote and breakout presentations, Jennifer draws from her years of experience in leadership and Human Resource Management. Using humor and fun, she is able to draw out audiences and participants and get them actively engaged. Participants report that they gained greater insight and learned more about themselves and their co-workers from one of her sessions than they did from all of their previous learning experiences combined.

Ms. Ledet has authored hundreds of articles on leadership and management, and writes monthly leadership columns that appear in several business publications, as well as her own e-newsletter and online blog. She provides take-home value that can be applied immediately in her consulting, coaching, seminars, and as a keynote speaker.
