Tenured Consortium University faculty members above the rank of instructor may not be admitted into the doctoral program.

Students who do not have a master's degree in school administration or the equivalent, may be required to complete three to nine hours of course work in educational administration, either before or during the doctoral program. Students who have not completed courses in graduate statistics and research methods must include these courses in their program of study.

Preliminary Review

At or near the beginning of the student's work in the doctoral degree program, the department may conduct a preliminary review to determine the student's potential for success in a program of study leading to the doctoral degree and to assess the student's advising needs in planning the student's program of study.

Upon successful completion of the Preliminary Review, the campus Consortium Coordinator will notify the Graduate School.
