Comparative Terrorism - This course is taught from the perspective of Comparative Politics, examining the concept of terrorism and how it has manifested itself in different regions, political systems, and cultures. The course introduces different types of terrorism, as well as how and why they have developed over time in different political and cultural environments. The course proceeds to focus on case studies of a variety of major terrorist groups in Europe, North America, Latin America, Asia, Africa, and the Middle East in the post-WWII era. Special attention is paid to the role of women in terrorist organizations, examining why women are active in some groups and not others, and how their motivations are manifested. The course will conclude with a comparative overview of counter-terrorist and anti-terrorist policies.

Honors 401: Ideas and Issues in Arts and Humanities.
- M/W 02:00 – 03:15 p.m.

For more information contact:
Dr. Margaret Gonzalez-Perez:
E-mail: mgonzalez@selu.edu