Introduction

The first Strategic Priority for Southeastern is “To provide competitive educational opportunities that attract diverse well-prepared students who progress and graduate.” In order to better understand the reasons why students leave Southeastern before graduating, Institutional Research & Assessment contracted with the Southeastern Social Science Research Center to conducted the Non-Returning Student Survey, a phone survey of Fall 2008 cohort students who were not enrolled in Fall 2009. Students who had been suspended were excluded from the sample. This report details the results of the Non-Returning Student Survey.
Method

Participants

The population for this study were the 852 students of the Fall 2008 cohort who were not enrolled in Fall 2009 and had not been suspended. After repeated attempts, 532 students remained unreachable by the available phone numbers, 157 refused to be part of the survey, and 163 surveys were completed, for a response rate of 51%. Table 1 provides a demographic comparison of the population and the sample.

Procedure

The Office of Institutional Research & Assessment contracted with the Southeastern Social Science Research Center to conduct the Non-Returning Student Survey. The survey was administered by phone, using trained and experienced student interviewers.

Instrument

The survey first asked a series of questions to determine if students planned on returning to Southeastern in the future, and if they had intended to obtain a degree when they began at Southeastern. Respondents who indicated they did not plan on returning to Southeastern were given a list of possible reasons why a student might leave college, and were asked to rate whether it was a major reason, a minor reason, or not a reason at all in their decision to leave Southeastern. Students who indicated that they did plan to continue their education at Southeastern were first asked when they planned to return to Southeastern. They were then given a list of possible reasons why a student might stop attending Southeastern for a while, and were asked to rate whether each item was a major reason, a minor reason, or not a reason at all in their decision to “stop-out.” The final section asked for demographic information that is not collected as a part of the application or registration process, such as the number of children a student has and how far they have to travel to campus. The entire survey can be found in Appendix A.
Results

The first set of questions was to determine whether students were: 1) Drop-Outs, those students who no longer plan to continue their education at Southeastern, including those who plan on or have transferred elsewhere; 2) Stop-outs, those students who plan to return to Southeastern at some point. Based on these definitions, 45% (n=78) of the respondents are Drop-Outs, 41% (n=71) are Stop-outs, and 14% (n=24) were unsure of their plans.

Stop Outs

The majority of the Stop-outs (63%, n=25) plan on returning to Southeastern in Spring 2010, and 38% (n=17) did return. Thirty-one percent (31%, n=22) planned on returning to Southeastern within the next year. Four percent (4%, n=3) plan on returning within the next two years, and 1% (n=1) plans on returning within the next five years.

Next, Stop-outs were asked to indicate whether each of nine possible reasons was a Major Reason, a Minor Reason, or Not a Reason for their decision to stop attending Southeastern for a while. “Need to earn more money” was the item with the largest endorsement, with 62% of respondents indicating it was a reason they stopped attending Southeastern. This was followed by “Had family responsibilities to take care of” which 59% of respondents indicated was a reason they stopped attending.

Table 1 provides the percentage of endorsement for Major Reason, Minor Reason, and Not a Reason for each item.

Drop Outs

Most of the Drop-outs (82%) intend to finish their education elsewhere, and 68% of the Drop-outs had already enrolled in another school. When asked what school they have or will enroll in, the most commonly cited school was Delgado. Table 7 provides the schools students identified as having enrolled in or planning to enroll in.

Respondents were then asked what was the main reason they decided to attend another school. Thirty-eight percent (38%) of the respondents indicated they wanted to attend a school closer to home/work, or they were tired of commuting to Southeastern. Twenty-seven percent (27%) said they decided to attend another school because the major or program they were interested in was not available at Southeastern. An additional 8% transferred because of financial reasons. All the responses can be found in Appendix B.

Next, Drop-outs were asked to indicate whether each of thirty-eight possible reasons was a Major Reason, a Minor Reason, or Not a Reason for their decision to leave Southeastern. “Decided to attend a different college” was the item with the largest endorsement, with 70.5% of respondents indicating it was a reason they left Southeastern. This was followed by “Moved to a new location” (38.4%) and “Too much stress” (37.2%).

Difficult Course(s)

Students were asked if they had problems with any particular course. Fifty respondents (29%) identified a particular course or courses with which they had problems. Math was the most commonly cited course, with 36 respondents (72%) indicating a particular math course or just math in general. Specific courses cited included MATH 155 (5 respondents - 10%), MATH 92 (14 respondents - 28%), and MATH 161 (7 respondents - 14%). The next most commonly cited type of course was science (9 respondents - 18%), with 7 (14%) indicating a biology course (1 specifically cited GBIO 106 and two cited GBIO 151) and two (4%) indicating a chemistry course. Four (8%) had problems with a history course, three (6%) indicated they had problems with English courses, and three (6%) had problems with SE 101. All courses and any comments made about them can be found in Appendix C.
Demographics of Drop-Outs and Stop-Outs

The last portion of the survey asked participants for demographic information that is not readily available as part of the student record system. Answers to these questions help give a better understanding as to what type of student will leave Southeastern either temporarily or permanently. The vast majority of students (86%) have never been married, and do not have children (84%). A fourth (25%) of the respondents traveled more than 30 miles (one way) to Southeastern’s main campus, while another fourth (22%) lived on campus. Approximately 57% of the respondents worked off campus. An additional 6% worked on campus. Thirty-seven percent (37%) of those who worked, spent more than 30 hours a week working, with an additional 35% spending 21-30 hours a week working. Twenty-four percent (24%) of the respondents are first-generation college students, which according to Terenzini et al (1996) is a student who has no parent with any college or university experience.

Comparison to Previous Year

The results of this year’s survey were compared to the survey conducted last year of the 2007 cohort. There were some differences that should be noted between the two surveys. This year a much higher percentage of students indicated that family responsibilities was a reason for stopping out. Last year a total of 47.3% of the students cited it as a reason for stopping out, while this year 59.2% cited it as a reason.

For all drop-outs, the main reason for not returning to Southeastern was decided to attend a different college, which was the same as last year. However, after the top rated reason, there are significant changes. The second most commonly cited reason this year was moved to a new location (38.4% of respondents), this was ranked 4th in percent of endorsement last year (35.7%). Too much stress remained third on the list, but the percent of students who indicated it was a major reason increased by 3.7%.
