The Division of General Studies

BARBARA R. ALLEN, Dean

The Division of General Studies supports the University’s role and mission by providing educational opportunities, promoting scholarly activities, and encouraging service.

OBJECTIVES

The Division of General Studies works with campus administrators, faculty, students and community representatives to prepare students for a wide variety of educational experiences and career opportunities. More specifically, the objectives of the Division of General Studies include the following:

1. To offer degree programs that prepare students to enter careers requiring a broad background of knowledge and skills.
2. To prepare students to achieve career and life goals by
   • Promoting student progression and persistence through an active advising program.
   • Assisting students with career-decision making skills and information concerning job opportunities through career planning courses.

DIVISION OF GENERAL STUDIES

The Division of General Studies provides students with educational opportunities, experiences, and career direction to meet their professional and academic goals. An interdisciplinary degree is often highly desirable in a rapidly changing world and provides greater flexibility in creating a curriculum for an undergraduate degree. The purpose of the degree program is (1) to provide flexibility to students with broad interests, (2) to offer an option to those with new interests or those changing their majors late in their academic careers, and (3) to prepare students for entry into certain graduate and professional programs.

ASSOCIATE OF GENERAL STUDIES

PURPOSE

The major purpose of a General Studies Associate Degree is (1) to prepare students seeking employment, (2) to make occupational advancement possible, and (3) to provide the general education foundation for those interested in continuing in a four-year degree program.

The Associate of General Studies may also be earned through an affiliation agreement with North Oaks Health System School of Radiologic Technology and Cardiovascular Technology Training, Inc. The clinical entry component is extremely competitive, and the completion of the core courses at Southeastern does not guarantee acceptance into the program. Once enrolled at North Oaks School of Radiologic Technology or Cardiovascular Technology Training, Inc., students are no longer eligible for financial aid at Southeastern. Students interested in this program should consult with the Department Head in Nursing. Students must follow general associate degree requirements for the university.
