

DEPARTMENT OF COMMUNICATION SCIENCES & DISORDERS

The Department of Communication Sciences & Disorders provides professional services to school systems, medical, and rehabilitation facilities within the University's community to assist in strengthening their programs for individuals with communication disorders. The Department of Communication Sciences & Disorders offers an undergraduate curriculum leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science. This four-year curriculum prepares students to serve individuals with communication disorders. Clinical practica are required. Students enrolled in clinical practica courses will be subject to a criminal background check. The Department also offers curriculum and clinical practica leading to a Master of Science degree in Communication Sciences & Disorders. Please refer to the Graduate School section of this catalogue.

SPEECH-LANGUAGE-HEARING CLINIC

The Department of Communication Sciences & Disorders operates the campus-based Speech-Language-Hearing Clinic. The Clinic serves as a teaching facility for the application of clinical methodology and sound theoretical principle. It also affords students the opportunity to employ scientific methodology of research to the clinical and supervisory processes. The Clinic functions to provide quality services to individuals who have communication disorders.

COMPUTER LITERACY VALIDATION

Computer literacy is defined by the department as: The ability to use a computer to input data, to use e-mail, to deliver presentations, and to access data through the Internet. Students who complete the requirements for the major in the speech-language and hearing specialist program must demonstrate computer literacy in their academic and clinical courses. Therefore, all majors who successfully complete the degree are deemed computer literate.

HONORS DIPLOMA IN THE DISCIPLINE

The department also offers an upper-division honors curriculum allowing its students to earn an honors diploma in the major at graduation. For information about requirements and honors courses in this department, please contact the Department Head.
