

Student Awards 2013 - 2014

- » Chrissy Carter, an anchor-reporter for the award-winning student newscast of the Southeastern Channel’s “Northshore News,” won the 2013 student Emmy for “On-Camera Performance.” It was the only Emmy awarded to a college student in the Suncoast Region, which is comprised of all television stations and production entities in Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Puerto Rico.
- » Sean Craft won the top undergraduate research award for his oral presentation on research that analyzes stresses and weaknesses in welded metals using laser interferometry. He is a senior majoring in physics, math and computer science.
- » Southeastern Resident Assistants won three awards at the Equipping Resident Assistants Conference. Hammond Hall’s “Community Clusters” programs won the award for Community Building Program of the Year. In addition, two resident assistants were recognized for their outstanding work. Jacob Currier, third-year resident assistant for Cardinal Newman Hall, was chosen as the 2014 Male Resident Assistant of the Year for the state of Louisiana. First year resident assistant for Taylor Hall, Sarah Lepine, was chosen as the 2014 Female Rising Star for the state. Southeastern students Caitlin Bueche, Aaron Johnson, and Mikaela Ingalls came in third place for the Case Study competition, in which resident assistants from each school presented potential solutions for a fictional incident.
- » McCrea 1971: Louisiana’s Forgotten Rock Festival, a documentary by Nick Brilleaux and Scott Caro, and “The Riddle,” a music video by Nick Authement, both won Emmys from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Suncoast Region in the Photography category.
- » A team of students from Southeastern’s Communication Sciences and Disorders program distinguished themselves at the national conference of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association when they scored first place in the organization’s Knowledge Bowl.
- » Eight Southeastern students have been honored with Gold Circle Awards from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association for their work on the university’s 2013 yearbook, Le Souvenir.
