College students are not valuing freedom of speech

Colleges should expose their students to different viewpoints, but students are shying away from sharing their opinions in fear of controversy. The current political climate and the demand for political correctness are preventing students for saying what they believe. For more information, click below:

How to stand out in a job interview

Fall Commencement is coming up soon, so here are a few tips for graduating seniors on how to stand out in interviews from the global head of talent for LinkedIn:

NOCA Report:

NOCA's fall fundraiser

By Cayla Jefferson

NOCA held our annual Halloween raffle on October 30th. Club members organized the event in the student union. Raffle volunteers did an excellent job of recruiting people to visit the table, as well as advertising the raffle on NOCA’s social media pages.

Students and faculty could pay $1 to receive a raffle number. The prizes included candy bags, baked goods, donations from Obsession Boutique, sunglasses, a G-shock watch, face masks, phones accessories and Southeastern T-shirts. The most successful item being raffled was the fudge brownies made by our very own club member, Richard McKinney. Everyone who won the brownies couldn’t help but have more!

This raffle was one of the most successful the club has had in recent semesters. The club earned almost $50 during the four hour raffle. And not only were people interested in the raffle, they were also interested to learn about the club. We are now looking forward to our raffle next semester!
