Honors students at Southeastern can fulfill some of their Honors Diploma requirements by contracting with a course's instructor to turn that course into an Honors version of the course (e.g. COMM 400 can become COMM 400H on the student's transcript). Honors versions of courses should provide students with more experience, insight, and/or academic rigor than the non-honors version of the course would provide.

This form records an agreement between a student and course instructor regarding terms of the student's project being undertaken for H-Option Credit. To launch a project, the form should be signed by the instructor and the student and submitted to the Honors office no later than the fourteenth (14) day of a regular course semester (7th class day for term and summer classes).

The Honors office will contact the instructor at the end of the semester to certify the H-option was completed and Honors credit for the course should be awarded. Certification from the instructor must take place prior to the last day of class.

The instructor should ascertain the following while advising the student:

1. The student is proposing a project that will be a bona fide full-semester project enhancing the overall rigor, interdisciplinarity, depth/breadth of learning, and/or experiential component of the course, not just an "extra assignment."
2. The H-Option project will be related in some way to the complete scope of the course.
3. The project will result in an appropriate finished product by the last day of class (e.g., paper, data presentation, exhibition).
4. The instructor has clarified for the student expectations regarding the scope and quality of the completed project and how completion of the H-option requirements will figure into the final grade calculation for the course (if at all).

► For the instructor: Would you like this student to present this project at the end-of-semester Honors Research Showcase? Yes ___ No
